

Donation Form

Down Syndrome Australia was formed in 2011 by the state and territory Down syndrome associations to ensure people with Down syndrome had a national voice and to promote genuine community inclusion for people with a disability. Down Syndrome Australia works hard to advocate for change and to challenge community perceptions about Down syndrome.

Down Syndrome Australia depends heavily on the support of donors and volunteers. Without donations, it would be very difficult to provide supports such as:

- resources for families when a baby with Down syndrome is born
- a national journal
- advocacy and policy advice on behalf of people with Down syndrome and their families to the federal government
- a national website
- national training resources for families
- a network of social media groups providing peer support for families
- promotion and awareness of people with Down syndrome in the Australian community
